Rumors were prevalent among the passengers on the Majestic that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who was traveling with her husband, Brigadier General Cornelius Vanderbilt, had undergone an operation for an ear affection. This fact could not be verified, but it was admitted by Cornelium Vanderbilt jr., who met his parents on the ship down the Bay, that his mother was indisposed. Mrs. Vanderbilt had been in Europe since April and was joined by her husband last June. Their daughter, Grace, who was bocked to sail with her parents, did not arrive, but is expected to follow in two weeks. They went to their Fifth Avenue home.
